Ohio County Legislative Ticket.
The Republicans of Ohio county have wisely sent to the county convention representative men. Among other things it will be the duty of these delegates to make a wise choice of nominees for the house of delegates.

If they name four men of standing and recognized fitness from the important constituency for the lower house of the legislature, there is every probability that the people of the county will ratify the choice.

If they make their selections on the theory that "anybody can be elected this year" the result will be the defeat of the whole ticket; and that result would be in accordance with the fitness of things.

So far as the INTELLIGENCER is aware the delegates are up to this time free to make such choice as shall seem best with regard to the election of nominees and the service they may render in the house of delegates. This is well for party prospects, and the delegates cannot do better than to hold themselves resolutely in this attitude until they shall have had opportunity to confer with each other and take the measure of the available material.

If there ever was a time when the Republicans of Ohio county should be careful to make no mistake in their nominations that time is now. The importance of selecting the right men in Ohio county is not to be overestimated.

It gives the INTELLIGENCER pleasure to call attention to the good order that prevailed at the Republican primaries. The fight was hot, but the peace was not broken.

Result of the Republican Primaries.
The Republican primary contest in Ohio county was fought with spirit and determination. Some good men went down, but that is the fortune of war. Some good men were victorious, and they are entitled to the party's support at the polls.

The understanding which lies at the foundation of the primary election is that the minority will accept the result with good grace and give loyally the support they would have expected if the battle had gone the other way.

The interest in the voting and the number who were out show that the Republicans of Ohio county are not asleep this year. The day was full of good omens.

DELEGATES to the Ohio county convention should make no pledges with regard to legislative nominations. Let them hold themselves free to put up the best ticket that can be made. This is the way to make a successful ticket.

A Wild Governor's Bad Example.
Governor Waite is greatly increased over the brutal treatment of the attorney general of the state by a lawless gang. The tortured officer is the governor's friend and appointee.

Nothing the governor can say will be too strong a condemnation of the deed, but Governor Waite is the last man to complain of disregard of the law. He has encouraged that very thing. From the executive office he has taught the doctrine that the law should not be allowed to stand in anybody's way.

From the day he became governor he has been a mischief-maker, a disturber of the peace, an enemy to the order of his state. He did not put the feathers on Attorney General Tarsney, but it is not a great stretch of imagination to say he got the tar ready.

The mob that tarred and feathered the attorney general of Colorado was probably looking for the governor.

Two Kinds of Democrats.

Congressman Capenhart writes to the Hickory Club, of Parkersburg, that he is a free trader, is sorry he voted for a 40 cent duty on coal, and rather thinks he will vote against the Wilson bill when it comes back from the senate. That is the right kind of talk for a Democrat—free trade straight out from the shoulder. Mr. Capenhart is to be commended for his honesty.

Another kind of Democrat tries to run with the hare and hunt with the hounds, modifies his free trade according to circumstances, has no settled economic principles, and is willing to go any way that will bring him votes. These are some of that sort in West Virginia.

The Sugar Trust and the Democratic Party.

Democrats of the Senate investigating committee showed an eagerness to cut off the investigation before any more could be gotten out of the representatives of the sugar trust than they had been forced to tell. Nor does the Democratic protection of the sugar trust end there.

Great earnestness was displayed to start the newspaper correspondents on the road to indictment for refusing to tell who gave them information. Just as great earnestness is being shown to save the sugar trust representatives for refusing to tell what is within their own knowledge.

The president and the treasurer of the trust were on the stand and admitted that they gave money to the Democratic state committee of New York in the campaign of 1892, but nothing could induce them to tell how much they gave. The amount was so large—half a million it has been said to be—that they would not tell and the committee does not want them to tell.

These representatives were very careful to try to make it appear that the contribution had nothing to do with national politics. The Democratic state committee in New York was at that time engaged in a very important game of national politics. To carry that great state was of the highest moment to the Democratic party, and the trust put up accordingly.

If newspaper correspondents can be certified for indictment because they will not give the sources of their information, why cannot representatives of the sugar trust be brought to the rack to tell what they did with their own hands? Is it scandalous to be made more scandalous by letting those men down gently?

En-Gov'ment Winsor's has taken a run down to Washington to see whether it is the settled and irreversible policy of the administration to permit the United States marshal for West Virginia to deploy his skirmishers to nominate for the house of delegates men selected by Senator Camden. Up to date it is not revealed whether Mr. Wilson has been able to get any satisfaction from the great heads.

This peculiar campaign for a seat in the senate from South Carolina must make the people ask whether the once boasted chivalry of that state has evaporated. Tillman and Butler abuse each other like bushwicks, and the crowds seem to enjoy it. Tillman began this style of campaigning, but Butler followed suit with a vengeance.

Congressmen are anxious to get away from Washington on account of the heat. Some of them will be just as eager to get back to the next house, but circumstances over which they will have no control will prevent. They may as well make the best of it while they are here.

Crook's friends say he is coming home. He will arrive after the investigating committee has adjourned. It makes no difference when he comes or whether he never comes. The committee has enough without him. But the district attorney may have business with him.
